HOUSING MILLIONS

By James Willsher

THE next step in one of London's biggest regeneration projects looks set to go ahead with another 1,000 homes to be built at Woodberry Down.

A funding package was announced this month for the Council's regeneration programme for the area, ensuring that it continues through the downturn in the housing market.

The Council is investing over £16million during the next four years, while developer Berkeley Homes has contributed more than £30million. Funding for affordable housing has also been received from the Homes and Communities Agency.

The development programme will deliver a range of new facilities including a health centre, and retail and commercial opportunities. This follows hot on the heels of the 1,000 homes already being built there, as well as a new community centre and the Skinner's Academy, completed last November.

Planning permission was also granted earlier this month for construction work by Berkeley Homes at the Horston and Sherwood, and Newnton Close sites, with the next phase of planned work being considered in March, which will together create a total of 226 homes for social renting, 182 for shared ownership, and the remainder for private sale.

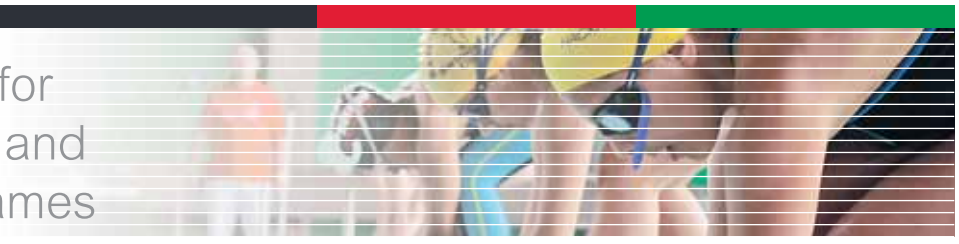

Taken together, the funding and planning approval mean that nearly half of the 4,600 homes planned for the 20-year regeneration programme are now either under construction or due to be built over the next five years.

Cllr Karen Alcock, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: "The Council made a pledge to residents that despite the economic climate we would find new and innovative methods with partners to provide housing at Woodberry Down.

Grades officially on the up

Top performing 2010 GSCE students from Mossbourne Academy

By Marcel Reinard

GOVERNMENT figures have confirmed another year of improving GCSE and A level results in Hackney schools and colleges.

For the first time, stats have been released showing school GCSE results against the new English Baccalaureate. To achieve the Baccalaureate, students must get grade A* to C in English, Maths, Science, plus humanities and language.

Hackney has met the national average of 15 per cent of pupils hitting the mark for this recently added measure, with some schools achieving well above this including: 69 per cent of pupils at Yesodey Hatorah Jewish Secondary School for Girls; 33 per cent at Mossbourne Academy; and 25 per cent from Our Lady's Convent School.

HCC student Pawel Ladosz helped boost the college's scores, gaining two A*s and an A at A-level

At A/AS level and equivalents like BTEC, the borough has seen a 3.7 per cent improvement in 'points score' per student – a rating system that measures both individual grades and the subjects studied by each pupil during the academic year.

Hackney also came out as the most improved area in the country on point score per student over the last two years – up by an impressive 15 per cent.

Hackney Community College (HCC) celebrated improvements with their average point score per student rising by 25 per cent compared to three years ago.

Further data showed 'value added quality' also rose significantly, with students achieving one A level grade higher than those from similar backgrounds across the country.

Yvonne Servante, Deputy Director of The Learning Trust, which runs the borough's educational services on behalf of the Council, said: "With exam results above the national average, Hackney is a place of choice for secondary education and that's testament to the hard work and dedication of our schools."

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, added: "This is excellent news; it clearly shows that secondary schools across Hackney are making considerable progress and we will do our utmost to ensure this improvement continues.

"I'd like to congratulate the young people and teachers who have all worked so hard to achieve these results."

Actor Idris Elba and his father, Winston Elba, at Elba House with new resident, Pat Benjamin

By James Willsher

HOLLYWOOD heavyweight Idris Elba returned to his roots to open a housing block named after him in recognition of his links to the borough.

The star who played Stringer Bell in the hit US TV series 'The Wire', as well as upcoming comic book movie 'Thor', unveiled 'Elba House'– a new affordable homes development in Andre Street, E8.

> "I've lived all over the place but the only place I recognise as where I come from is Hackney"

Idris, who grew up just a few of miles down the road on the Holly Street Estate in Dalston, was accompanied by his father Winston and welcomed to the development on 14 January by one of its new residents, Pat Benjamin, 44.

Speaking about his links to the borough, Idris said: "I've lived all over the place, but the only place I recognise as where I come from is Hackney."

He added that the tribute 'means so much'.

In December, the 38-year-old actor returned to Hackney to film the second series of BBC's cop drama 'Luther'; the first won him a nomination at this year's Golden Globes.

The £6.2million Andre Street project by not-for-profit organisation A2Dominion has created 23 new homes for affordable rent, and part-buy/part-rent aimed at local people.

Woodberry Down funding

"The Council's own investment demonstrates our ongoing commitment to one of the largest regeneration programmes in the capital."

She added: "Hackney is also among the top-performing London boroughs for affordable housing provision, and is on course to exceed a three-year total target of creating 1,961 affordable homes by 2011."

Justin Tibaldi, Managing Director of Berkeley Homes (Capital), said: "We are totally committed to it and will continue to work closely with our partners to ensure that together we deliver the investment necessary to create a real, sustainable community where people will choose to live, and that provides long-term social and economic benefits for the wider area."

Ruchell Peng, Genesis Regeneration Manager for Woodberry Down, added: "It is a real achievement that the partnership work at this important site is starting to bear fruit and is further proof of Genesis' work to deliver the kind of houses and services that local communities deserve."

Genesis will acquire and manage around 1,900 of the affordable rented and intermediate homes over a 20 year period. This equates to 41 per cent of the total at Woodberry Down.

The first new homes for social renting are expected to be ready for occupation this spring.

Message from the Mayor

Putting frontline services first

WE are now well into 2011, but across the country councils are still grappling with the problem they were given at the end of last year – the issue of the Government's grant cuts, and the savings we have to make in order to maximise the amount of services we all continue to provide.

Here in Hackney I'm determined that in the forthcoming budget the Council will not be making cuts to the frontline services it provides residents – there will be no raising of eligibility criteria for home care for the elderly, there'll be no library closures, no closure of children's centres, no reduction in the cleanliness of our streets. We are even going to try and pick up some of the services previously funded by Team Hackney – all such local partnerships across the country have had their grant funding completely cut or reallocated elsewhere by the Government.

In previous years we made huge efficiency savings each year and used the money to improve or expand services, absorbing higher costs such as inflation, or catering for more service users, while keeping Council Tax frozen for five years. Now the first call on the cash from any efficiency savings will have to be back-filling the Government's grant cuts, just so that we're able to keep delivering services at the front line.

However, even the dramatic reductions the Council is making to the costs of management and the loss of support staff through voluntary redundancy will not cover the cut in grants in the long term. It has been recently claimed that merging services with other boroughs to save on management costs will enable councils to avoid any impact on services. But even if every London council sacked its Chief Executive, its Directors and Assistant Directors, and shared just one single super-manager for the whole city, this wouldn't even deliver a tenth of what the capital's boroughs are expected to save over the next four years by the Government.

Even though we are protecting front-line, day-to-day service delivery, the borough will be badly affected by a lack of future investment. Worst of these is reduction in the amount of money available to councils for Decent Homes work that will push housing improvements for many residents way off into the future. The money we will be able to put aside for new schools, investment in parks, resurfacing roads and pavements, will be extremely limited.

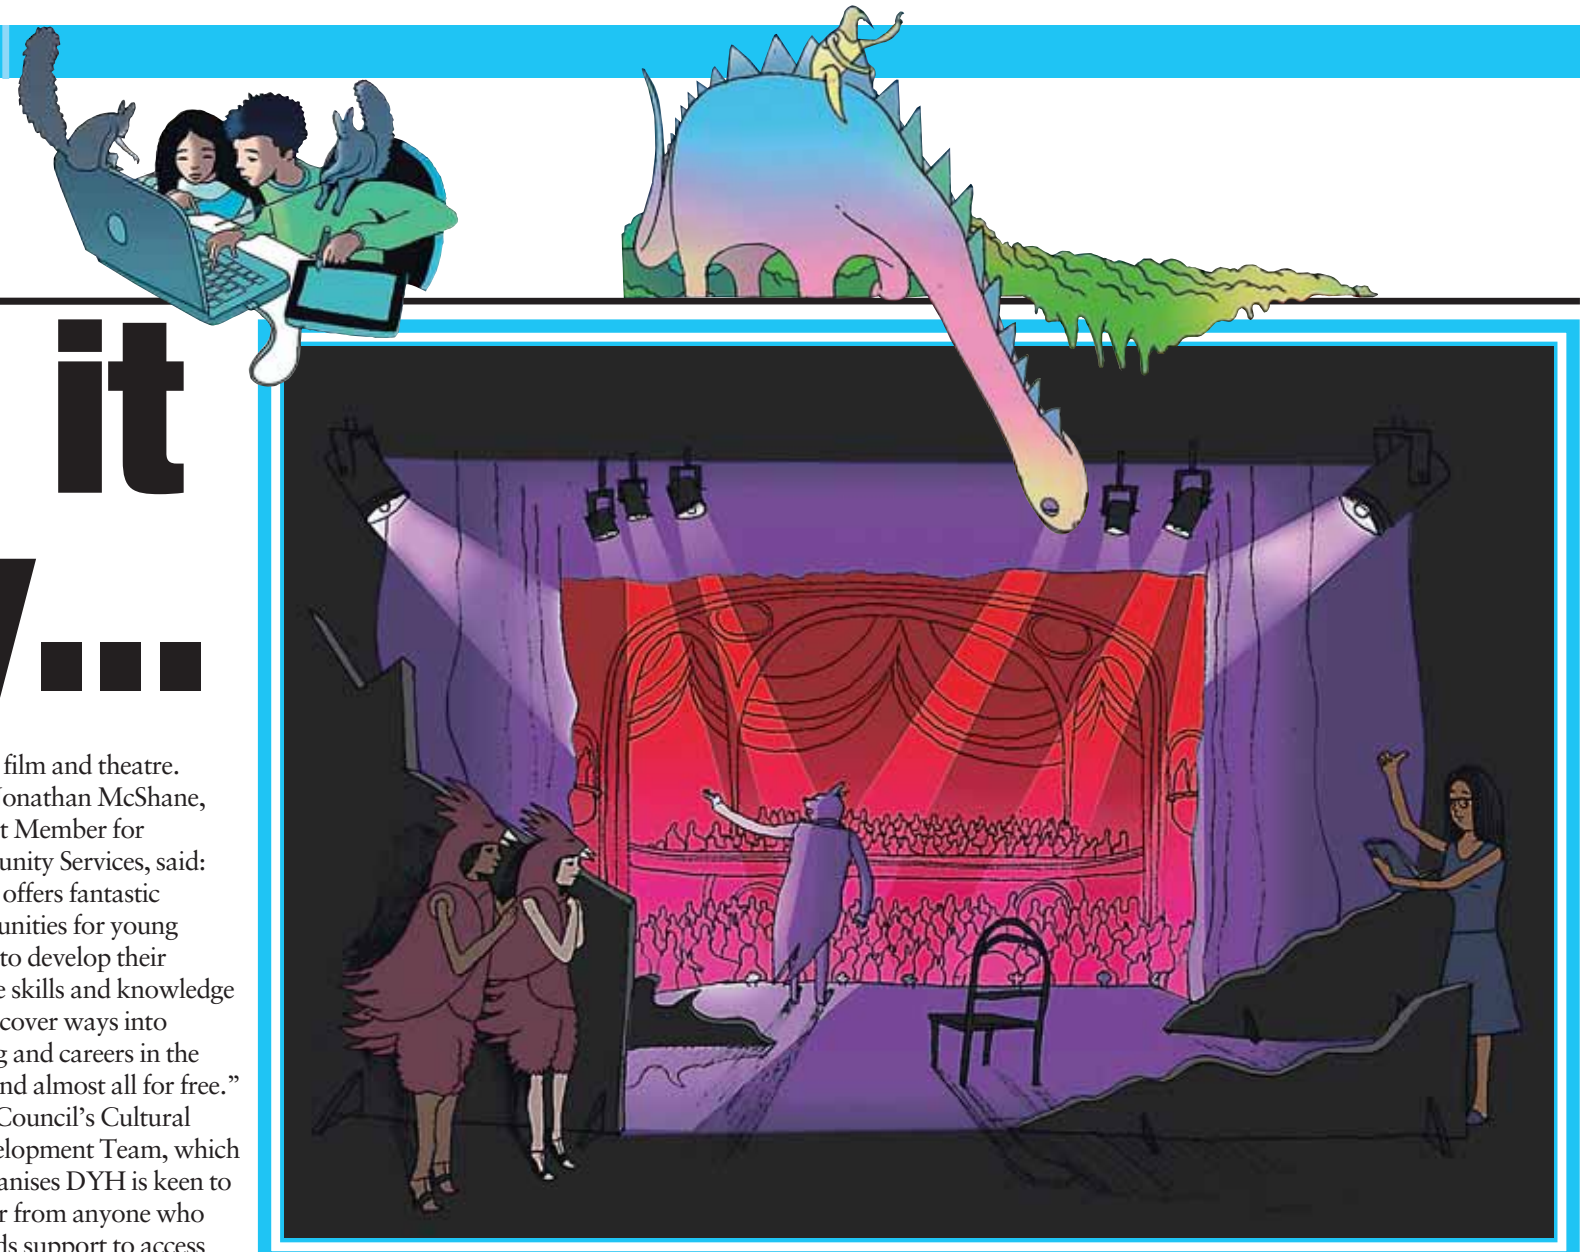

Along with the Government's changes to housing benefit and its withdrawal of the Education Maintenance Allowance to more than 3,500 of the borough's students, Hackney cannot escape the impact of the national spending review. However, I will ensure the Council remains committed to shielding residents from its worst effects.

LGBT History Month

HACKNEY Museum has announced two events to mark Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender (LGBT) History Month in February.

An exhibition of photography called 'Ethnic Minorities Coming Out' is on display until 7 March. The images by photographer, Sonalle Maroo, illustrate their subjects' personal experiences of revealing their sexuality.

> "Partaking in the production of the images helped many of the subjects confront and deal with their reality"

Sonalle, who is British born, of Indian descent, said of the collection: "I am aware of the difficulties of coming out in ethnic minority societies. Family and friends often suffer due to their narrow-mindedness hurting or rejecting the person coming out.

"Talking about the experience and partaking in the production of the images helped many of the subjects confront and deal with their reality, whilst allowing them to come out through the means of photography."

The 'Walking Proud in East London' oral history project also launches at the Council-run museum on 10 February. It features the memories and experiences of 51 LGBT interviewees. Community organisation River Cultures collected the spoken histories from a diverse range of people all over East London, supported by a Heritage Lottery Fund grant. The touring exhibition goes on display at Tower Hamlets Local History Library & Archives, Bancroft Road E1, from 15-25 February.

AN exhibition showcasing the history of boxing in the East End is now open at Hackney Museum.

'East End Boxing Lives' is free and runs until 30 April. Organised with the London Ex-Boxers' Association, the display charts boxing's development from the days of bare knuckle fighting; boxing with gloves in pubs and taverns; to its current status as an Olympic sport.

The exhibition at the Council-run museum includes memorabilia, photographs and interviews with some of the East End's finest boxers.

It highlights the lives of famous boxers such as Jewish prizefighter, Daniel Mendoza; 1948 Olympic lightweight, Ron Cooper; and local boys Terry Spinks MBE; Sammy McCarthy; James Cooke MBE; and Mickey Pye.

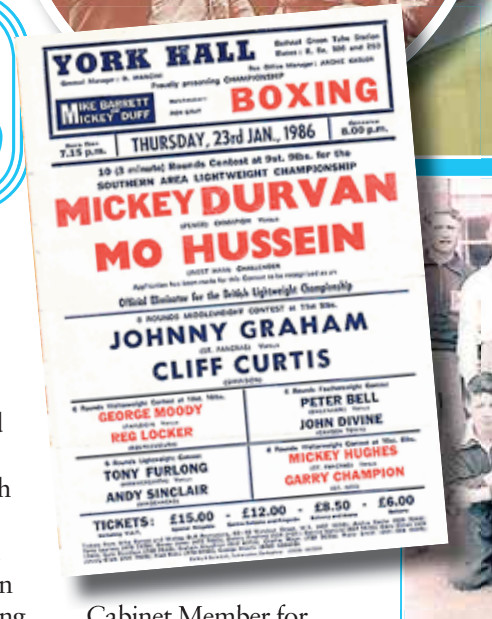

It's also a chance to find out more about female boxers and looks at Jewish and Black boxers and the discrimination they faced.

Visitors to the exhibition can limber up with a boxing training video, or just relax in a recreation of an ex-boxer's sitting room.

London Ex-Boxers' Association Chairman, Charlie Wright, said: " For the first time the boxing heritage of the East End will be told through the lives of the people who boxed, trained or worked here.

"As we approach London 2012, this is a story that will inspire many people especially young people looking for a sport that they can get involved with."

Cabinet Member for Community Services, Cllr Jonathan McShane, added: "Boxing played a major part in the lives of many Hackney people and it's an integral part of Hackney's social history. The exhibition tells a story that will interest people young and old."

A healthy living afternoon was the latest in a series of events to get people in Hackney excited about visiting their local library

By Nicola Quinn

THE Council continued its drive to encourage more people to take advantage of what's on offer at its eight libraries with a healthy living afternoon.

The event on 13 January was the second in a series of open days at Hackney libraries.

Visitors to Stamford Hill Library were able to take part in a range of activities all aimed at promoting healthy living, including sampling tasty salads, smoothie making, advice on stopping smoking, massages and free health checks.

> "Come along, join your local library for free and start taking advantage of what's on offer"

Cabinet Member for Community Services, Cllr Jonathan McShane, said: "Libraries really are a great resource for the local community.

"Not only can you borrow books, but you can also use the Internet for free, join a book club, hire a room for a meeting, or do your homework. Come along, join your local library for free and start taking advantage of what's on offer."

Throughout February the Council is holding a series of free, creative story-time sessions at libraries to encourage parents to read more with their children.

The sessions for under-fives will give parents the chance to brush up their storytelling skills through fun, creative reading sessions.

Parents attending the sessions can collect a free 'Talk to Me' DVD containing lots of top tips for helping children develop their speech and language.

On 5 February there will also be entertainment for children aged three to 10 and their parents or carers at Stoke Newington Library. The 'Ballet Among The Books' event, from 2-3.30pm, includes a ballet performance, workshop and fancy dress competition.

Homes sweet homes

George McGee has been a TRA member since the mid-1990s. He is currently chair of the Six Estates Steering Group, an elected residents' group that guides a major Council regeneration project

By James Willsher

AS a man who spent 40 years working in the building trade, it was only natural for George McGee to represent residents when the Council began regenerating housing estates in the borough.

George moved from Ireland to London in 1959, living in several places including the Kingshold Estate, near Victoria Park, and working as a painter and decorator for the Greater London Council (GLC) refurbishing offices and banqueting halls, as well as painting bridges across the Thames.

It was in the mid-1990s that he decided to get more involved with the estate where he lived – Landfield, just north of Hackney Downs – and was elected to its Tenants and Residents Association (TRA).

He says: "I got involved to improve the area, because it needed improving. Ottaway Court was in a terrible state, really run down, so the Council demolished it in 2006. There are some blocks in Hackney that got demolished; some are being repaired; but there are some where the cost to do them up through Decent Homes would be tremendous. There's a massive need for more social housing."

Not only is George the Chair of the Landfield Estate TRA, he is Deputy Chair of the Clapton Neighbourhood Panel, and also represents the north east of the borough on the Neighbourhood Investment Board, which oversees the Decent Homes improvements programme to bring social housing up to a national Government standard.

Just over five years ago he was elected Chair of the Six Estates Steering Group, the elected residents' group monitoring a large-scale Council regeneration project. This affects the former Ottaway Court and Rendlesham House sites, near Landfield Estate; Bridge House and Marian Court, in Homerton; Tower Court, near Stamford Hill; and the now-demolished Alexandra National House, opposite Finsbury Park.

George says: "When I started they made me Chair straight away. I didn't want to do it at first, I said 'maybe when all the building takes shape'. But I wanted to make sure it was done properly, as I've been dealing with contractors for a long time."

The sheer scale of the Six Estates regeneration programme means it affects hundreds of households in Hackney, with the Alexandra National House, Ottaway Court and Rendlesham House blocks demolished a few years ago and residents re-housed.

These sites have received over £16million in Government funding since 2009 for construction to take place, while other sites await demolition.

The Six Estates Steering Group meets every month with Council officers, construction contractors, councillors and an Independent Tenants and Leaseholders Adviser, who offers impartial advice.

> "I believe that it reduces anti-social behaviour if the community takes pride in where they live"

The group is not just a way of keeping residents informed about what's going on. George and the other members take a very active role in shaping the kind of homes being built.

He says: "We insisted on Parker Morris plus 10 per cent, a national house building size; and Level 4 for energy efficiency, windows triple glazed, under-floor heating which is all electric, and better insulation means reduced heating bills."

The Six Estates Steering Group also developed the Residents Charter, a document setting out the level of service residents can expect from the Council during regeneration and for managing the new homes. Residents are also able to choose options from a range of kitchen worktops and cabinets.

George firmly believes in the positive effect of regeneration, that it's not simply a process of building new homes.

He says: "It gets tenants a better standard, and I believe that it reduces anti-social behaviour if the community takes pride in where they live. If tenants move into a run-down estate they will lose heart at where they live, and this creates anti-social behaviour."

I'd really like to pass it on to someone who can use it – do you have any suggestions?

A: There are many people on low incomes who would appreciate donated furniture and it sounds like your old table could be of real use to someone else.
The Council has teamed up with an organisation called Homestore who will collect good quality furniture free of charge and sell it at reduced prices to households that need it. Please be aware that some items, such as electrical goods and office furniture, are not eligible for the scheme. To find out more call: 020 8519 6264.

A green giant

By Sarah Menz

A NEW exhibition in central London tells the story of how London's biggest open space has been transformed over several decades.

The Lee Valley Regional Park has been regenerated from a neglected post war area into an award-winning green space and sports destination, now home to some of London's 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games venues.

A dedicated Act of Parliament in 1967 empowered the Park to develop and preserve 10,000 acres of land, stretching 26 miles along the River Lee from Ware in Hertfordshire to East India Dock Basin on the Thames, and passing through Hackney's Middlesex Filter Beds on the way. The free exhibition invites people to learn the previously untold story of some of London's most beautiful green spaces, heritage sites and conservation areas.

A '2020 Vision' also outlines the Lee Valley Regional Park Authority's plans to transform the area further by 2020 by working with local councils like Hackney, and explains the authority's role in developing an inclusive and sustainable legacy the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

The exhibition runs until 12 February at NLA, The Building Centre, Store Street, WC1. Opening hours Mon-Fri, 9.30am-6pm; Sat, 9.30am-5pm.

The East London Water Works Company constructed the six filter beds to provide clean water after a cholera outbreak in 1852. The beds were replaced in 1969 and nature was allowed to take over

Get to know some wild inhabitants

A NEW schools programme is offering pupils a chance to learn about wildlife while in the great outdoors.
Primary and secondary schools are invited to take part in a range of activities, education projects and events as part of the 'Wild Place Your Space' community project. Run jointly by the RSPB and the Lee Valley Regional Park Authority, it focuses on a number of the Park's wild areas, including the Middlesex Filter beds in Hackney. The park is home to hundreds of plants and animals including peregrine falcons, kingfishers, grass snakes and common lizards.

Schools that book sessions will be offered textile-recycling banks by overseas aid charity TRAID. Any schools that take up this offer will also get free, guided class trips to the Lee Valley.

The project was awarded £379,000 from the Heritage Lottery Fund to engage East Londoners with the wildlife on their doorsteps. Education Officer Lucy Gijsen said: "We're aiming to help over 8,000 pupils discover and learn from the wildlife on their doorstep.

"What we'll find out links with the National Curriculum and can tell us so much about the world around us."

Have a green heart this year

By Mary Anna Wright

IT'S St Valentine's Day on 14 February, and if a loved one showers you with gifts, you may be wondering what to do once your roses have lost their bloom.

If you live in a street level property, roses and other flowers can be put in your compost bin or with garden waste in your Brown Bin for collection every fortnight. Remember to take off any plastic wrapping first.

Remember that you can recycle flowers and cards in Hackney – and if you feel creative, make a gift yourself

Garden waste collected in Hackney is composted down and used in the borough's parks.

Valentine cards and chocolate boxes can be put out with other cardboard in your weekly Green Box collection. Plastics like the trays in chocolate boxes can also be collected. It's really helpful for your collection crew if you sort each material into a separate bag.

If you live in a block of flats you can also recycle more than you think. Paper, cardboard and plastic can all be collected in your local recycling bank. If you read this before you have bought something for the big day, why not try and make Valentine's Day a little greener this year by picking presents that contain recycled materials or making your own.

Blazing a trail

By Marcel Reinard

A PUPIL who achieved a top grade in Spanish after losing her sight was just one of the inspirational stories told at the Trailblazers 2011 awards.

The annual Learning Trust (TLT) celebration of Hackney young people honoured over 240 secondary school pupils on 17 January in categories such as 'turning your life around' and 'outstanding achievement'. BBC football pundit Garth Crooks and entertainer Kat B featured among the supporting cast at the Hackney Empire event.

Sidony Warner, 17, lost her sight last year, but continued her studies to attain an A grade in her Spanish GCSE oral exam. Now back at school full time, her sight has returned in one eye, but she remains partially sighted. Receiving an 'achievement against the odds' accolade, she said: "When I lost my sight, I threw myself into my work. I wasn't much of a reader before, but now I love books and read regularly now my sight has started to return."

Picking up the same award, Jeanine Jarvis, 13, was diagnosed with Ehlers Danlos Syndrome, leaving her with severe joint pain and tiredness. The condition often prevents Jeanine from attending school, but teachers nominated her for the high quality of her work.

She said: "I want to do well at school but I do find it hard to get there and to do my homework. I am pleased that I won this award and think it's a good achievement."

Dean Cox, 13, won a 'turning your life around' prize after improving his behaviour and excelling on the rugby pitch. He has now been asked to train with Premiership side Saracens. He said: "I love playing rugby and can take my frustrations out on the pitch. I can see how important my GCSEs are to my future and want to get the grades."

> "When I lost my sight, I threw myself into my work. I wasn't much of a reader before but now I love books"

TLT Chief Executive, Alan Wood, said: "Trailblazers gives us a chance to showcase the extraordinary determination of young people in Hackney, whatever barriers they may face, to do the best they can."

Entertainment on the night included the Our Lady's choir, the Hackney Borough Youth Choir and the City Academy Jazz Band. The pupils also heard from Tony Talburt, of aspirational charity Excell 3, and motivational speakers Action Jackson and Alim Kamara.

Jeanine Jarvis received an achievement against all odds award for continuing to submit high-quality work, despite being diagnosed with a debilitating health condition

Murshida Mirzan, 16 – pictured with speakers Action Jackson and Alim Kamara – received 14 top grade GCSEs last year

Juliana Volpato, 16, moved from Brazil aged 12 without being able to speak English but is now in the top sets for most subjects

Sheela Gowda:

Until 12 March, Iniva, Rivington Place, EC2A

Indian artist Sheela Gowda has created large-scale installation art pieces investigating the physical qualities and sources of the materials she uses.

A dynamic new commission of painted wooden structures and ritual objects are shown alongside an earlier work of burned incense ash (pictured), manipulated into intricate patterns.

She takes everyday materials as the starting point for works that combine abstract forms with references to society.

Sheela Gowda lives and works in Bangalore, India, and while she has participated in many group exhibitions, this is her first solo show in the UK.

There will be a curator-led tour of the exhibition on 10 February at 6.30pm; and a series of film events on 17 & 24 February and 2 March.

Arcola Theatre premiere: The Painter

Until 12 February, Arcola Theatre, Ashwin Street, E9

By Ruth Garland

THE 19th century painter JWM Turner was one of the greatest artistic geniuses England has ever produced. But women, at least, could be rude about him. Queen Victoria described him as 'quite mad'. And in Rebecca Lekiewicz's new play, Jenny, a prostitute who sat for his 'anatomical sketches' tells him: "You want to try living some time. See what it feels like".

The Painter brings to life the old Colourworks paint factory as Turner's studio. Socially awkward, obsessed with his art, and loathing convention, there is something heroic about the artist's rudeness towards his wealthy patrons and his inability to play the role that his yearning lover, Sarah Danby (Niamh Cusack), expects of him.

As Turner, Toby Jones (above) combines irritability and coldness with vision, integrity, passion, and above all – humanity. Turner broke new ground as an artist but for him, it was quite simple: "You will find no better teachers than your own eyes. If you use them."

The new Arcola is next door to thriving music venue Cafe OTO, and just a few steps away from both Dalston Junction and Dalston Kingsland stations. With two studios seating 200 and 50 respectively, and extra rehearsal space, the Arcola enters its second decade in fine health. Welcoming a capacity audience to the opening night, Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe described the Arcola as 'one of the most dynamic, exciting and respected fringe theatres in the country', and thanked not only the volunteers who worked hard to refurbish the premises, but companies such as UBS and Bloomberg who provided much-needed financial support.

Over 100 people were at the Town Hall to hear about changes to adult social care in Hackney

Talk about change

By Caroline Howard

OVER 100 older people took part in a question and answer session about changes to adult social care with a panel of experts in the Council Chamber on 18 January.

The event, organised by Hackney Age Concern and the Council, started with presentations about the changes, outlining the new system which enables people to choose their own care packages with a personal budget from the Council.

The panel, including Professor Jill Manthorpe, Director of the Social Care Workforce Research Unit at King's College, and Tim Miller, Principal Project Manager for the Transformation of Adult Social Care in Hackney, were grilled on issues covering safeguarding, personal budgets, wellbeing services and employment.

Dr Cynthia White, Chair of the Older People's Reference Group, said: "The event was excellent. People came prepared and asked some good questions which shows that people have real concerns regarding the personalisation process."

News in brief

Free activities include swimming and volleyball

Young women: get fit for free

YOUNG women in Hackney will be able to exercise for free thanks to a new Council project funded by the Sport England Active Women scheme.

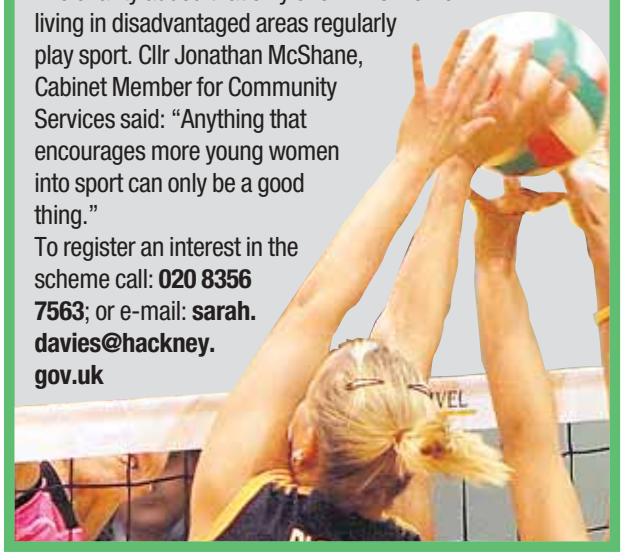

The two year project hopes to boost sport take-up among 16 to 25-year-olds, especially those with children, by offering free swimming, netball, football, volleyball, dance and fitness sessions at local leisure centres.

A series of 12-week programmes in a range of sports will start in the spring and the Council will be working closely with sports clubs to find opportunities for enthusiastic participants to continue each activity.

Women who care for children or live in disadvantaged communities face some of the biggest barriers to participation, such as cost, low body image confidence, and difficulties in finding childcare cover, according to research by the Women's Sport and Fitness Foundation.

The charity added that only one-in-10 women living in disadvantaged areas regularly play sport. Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services said: "Anything that encourages more young women into sport can only be a good thing."

To register an interest in the scheme call: 020 8356 7563; or e-mail: sarah.davies@hackney.gov.uk

Victoria in action at the gym

Back in shape with fitness project

A STROKE victim who used to struggle to climb stairs has exercised her way back to fitness with help from a Council project.

Victoria Alaku suffered a minor stroke in 2009, but was determined to regain her health. On hearing about the 10-week Fit 4 Health project, which helps stroke or Transient Ischaemic Attack sufferers who are ready to start a fitness programme, she said: "I jumped at the chance to do something to control my weight."

Prior to joining she had never used a gym before, however, with the closely monitored regime, she can now confidently use equipment such as rowing machines and treadmills.

Referring to the benefits, she added: "Weight loss – dropping from a trouser size 14-16 to 12 – and that I now can walk a lot faster. My friends are rushing to keep up with me. And my GP is pleased with my weight loss and control."

Other benefits cited by users include blood pressure and blood sugar control and improved stamina, strength, flexibility and balance.

The programme is run by the Council in partnership with NHS City and Hackney.

'(The long ocean voyage) had the effect of relieving my mind of the awful load pressing upon it at the time of my departure from home.'

The SS City of Berlin, on board which Williams fled to the US; photograph of Williams by T Protheroe; and various newspaper clippings following the story of his reappearance

I was lost, but now am found

Hackney Archives conclude the mystery of the missing Clapton preacher who fled to New York

By Sally England, Local Studies Librarian

WHEN the SS City of Berlin docked in New York on 27 February 1894, a Clapton congregation held its breath, awaiting news of its runaway pastor, Rev Pedr Williams.

He had fled his home earlier that month, and it was believed that Williams was on board a ship heading for New York. Scotland Yard had been informed of his mysterious departure, and much speculation had appeared in the press about the circumstances of his disappearance.

It emerged that 'under an assumed name and with some trifling disguises' the missing cleric had arrived in the USA. Cablegrams flew back and forth across the Atlantic, with newspapers piecing together events and speculating what Williams would do next.

His sickly wife was too ill and upset to make any comment, but there were rumours her husband would stay in America and try to find an ecclesiastical post or attempt to qualify for the Bar. The possibility was even mentioned of setting up a fund to help Mrs Williams join him.

But on 8 March the story broke that Williams would return, after realising during the voyage that he had made a mistake.

He arrived in London and said he was not 'ashamed in any way of what had happened, and he was quite sure that he could give a satisfactory explanation.'

Newspapers made much of the fact Williams owed £400 to the executors of sweet shop owner Ebenezer Newell, former head deacon of Lower Clapton Congregational Church. There were allegations that a writ for recovery of the full amount had been issued, triggering Williams' panic. In fact, an arrangement had been made in August 1893 for Williams to pay it back in instalments.

So what was the problem that caused him to flee the country? It appeared Williams' annual stipend was not enough to support his ailing wife, four sickly children and servants. He also admitted to offering excessive hospitality at his Amhurst Road home.

The church members and congregation met on 6 April to decide if Williams' offer of resignation should be accepted. A resolution was submitted not to accept, and a ballot resulted in 120 votes in agreement, 21 against, and nine neutrals.

So all was forgiven regarding Williams' moment of madness and he remained at Lower Clapton for 12 years, until he accepted a post of minister in Durban, South Africa. After 10 years, Williams moved to another post in Swansea before finally moving to Sneyd Park in Bristol in 1926. He died there in May 1931.

A scrapbook of cuttings about the disappearance, and the church minutes are held at Hackney Archives.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch.
Chef Owen Cool serves up a wobbly delight and explains why it's a good option that will impress your guests.
"Panna cotta – from the Italian for cooked cream – is one of my favourite desserts. It's easy and quick to make, lasts for up to five days in the fridge, and is dead simple to serve. Get the quantity of gelatine just right ,and the panna cotta will be deliciously silky."

Panna cotta with pear

Makes 10

Preparation time 30 mins (30)

Cooling time 1hr 30mins (90)

Ingredients

- 1,250ml double cream
- 250ml whole milk
- 4.5 leaves gelatine (powdered gelatine is also fine – just follow the instructions on the pack)
- 175g caster sugar
- 2 vanilla pods
- 5 pears

Method

- Soak gelatine in water
- Split vanilla pods and scrape out seeds. Everything goes in but the shells must be removed before you set the panna cotta
- Put all ingredients except gelatine in a pan and bring to the boil
- Take off the heat straight away and whisk in soaked gelatine
- Allow to cool and just before completely set, pour into small bowls or cups. If you do this too early the vanilla seeds will all sink to the bottom, but this doesn't really matter
- Cover and put in the fridge
- If pears are perfectly ripe just peel, core and slice. If unripe, peel and poach in two parts water and one part sugar until soft. Overripe pears can be salvaged by stewing, peeled and cored, with a little water, juice of a lemon and sugar to taste
- To get the panna cotta out of the bowls, dip in hot water and then turn onto a plate. Serve with the pears.

Waterhouse is a social enterprise that trains local people in the ethos of eco-friendly best practice in the restaurant industry.
Owned by Shoreditch Trust, its profits go back into a regeneration programme for the local area.

Social housing mobility

RESIDENTS and organisations in Hackney are being asked to take part in a capital-wide consultation on the Mayor of London's policies about social housing.
The aim is to increase opportunities for geographical mobility, and to have a pan-London social housing scheme in place by April.
It would cover a proportion of all new social rented homes across the city, as well as re-lets of existing homes.
The Homes and Communities Agency (HCA) London Board is running the consultation and wants to hear the views of tenants, housing associations and other key stakeholders about the broad principles of the scheme and how best to ensure a fair, rational and cost-effective way for people seeking a social rented home to live in an area of their choice.

The survey runs until 28 January. To read the full consultation document and give your views visit: www.london.gov.uk/consultation/mobility-londons-social-housing-tenants
Alternatively send an e-mail, with 'Pan-London housing mobility' as the subject, to: mayor@london.gov.uk; or write to: Pan-London Housing Mobility, Post Point 19, FREEPOST LON15799, City Hall, The Queen's Walk, SE1 2BR.

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years.

The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373.
